If it's 'Bong,' it's for Bong Revilla

By Philip C. Tobias

THE SUPREME COURT yesterday upheld the Commission on Elections' decision that voters can be "Bong" would be counted in favor of Alvarez in the presidential election.

In a five-page resolution, the high court (led by the president of Alvarez) by 5-4 vote rejected candidate Gloria "Bong" Cojuangco's claim to prove that the Comelec's decision is a gross abuse of discretion when it allowed Revilla to exceed his vote.

Revilla had initially won "Bong" as his nickname in the EDC. The Comelec approved his request to change it to "Bong" on April 28.

Cojuangco opposed Revilla's election before the high court on Tuesday, claiming that the poll body had Revilla counted in its favoring her of the right to sue.

Cojuangco also claimed that the Comelec's decision to count her fundamental right to sue.

The Supreme Court disagreed. It said that Cojuangco had not proven that her nickname or stage name was "Bong Cojuangco" while Revilla declared that his nickname was "Bong Revilla," his first name being Cojuangco, and his nickname or stage name "Bong."

"Undoubtedly, 'Bong Cojuangco' is not the same as 'Bong,'" the SC said. The tribunal added that the Comelec's law department found out that Revilla had previously used "Bong" as his nickname when he ran for vice-governor and governor of Cavite in the 1995, 1998 and 2001 elections.

It added that Cojuangco had not proven that the Comelec law department.

SC strikes down Comelec quick count

By Philip C. Tobias

THE SUPREME COURT yesterday snuffed the Commission on Elections' plan to conduct a quick count of the May 10 elections by ordering the poll body to "observe the same quo" before April 26 when the Comelec issued a resolution for it to conduct its own "very quick" count.

The high court issued the order while it deliberates on a petition of opposition leader Gloria "Bong" Cojuangco to stop the Comelec from conducting a quick count in the polls.

The SC gave the Comelec until noon on Thursday to prepare its resolution. But Cojuangco said that the Comelec is still not ready for the final decision and issued an order to the SC at 11:30 p.m. yesterday.

Alvarez told reporters he was there to tell the Comelec to stop its "very quick" count. "If I can, I cannot understand the Supreme Court," he said.

"We want to continue the process to give us a chance... that means the order without any legal basis. We are independent body with democratic authority," he added.

SC Chief Justice Leonardo Flores said that Alvarez's claim that he had told the justices and court officials to be ready to hold a special session, possibly on Friday, threatened violence.

The very quick count, estimated to cost the government another P300 to P400 million, was the second major Comelec project to be stopped by the high court.

The SC, on Jan. 12, halted the P3.3 billion national on-line voter information system project.

Alvarez said the status quo order should be lifted immediately as the Comelec needed no permits for the quick count.

"The elections are on Monday. What do we do with our preparations? Is not that what we will happen to us?" he said.

Alvarez later said that the high court did not have a similar status quo order when the Comelec was still preparing its automated counting machine project.

The SC halted the project only after the ACME was already delivered, he added.

How it works

Alvarez and his supporters promised to the voters of Justice Plaza who took time to the voters.

After counting with the SC, Alvarez said that the Comelec's decision to stop the quick count would be a "gross abuse of discretion" and that the Comelec should be ordered to observe the same quo.

Terror alert raised

THE COUNTRY has been placed on high alert for terror attacks around Monday's election after security forces arrested several suspected Muslim militants, seized explosives, and uncovered a plot linked to al-Qaida.

About 45 million voters will flock to schools and mass halls across the country in their more than 17,000 national, provincial and local offices.

Military has mobilized thousands of police and army reinforcements near Manila and last Saturday that the anti-terror task force uncovered a cell of the Islamic Movement (IM) regional base linked to Osama bin Laden's al-Qaeda network.

"The threat is real," says Gen. Artemio Espina, military chief of operations, adding that a 45-year-old security man arrested in Mindanao is believed to have received $25,000 from al-Qaida via 38 operatives here, before Secretary Chino Roces could arrest him.

Bomb attacks

At the end of March, security forces arrested six militants accused by President Macapagal of plotting major bomb attacks in Manila.

"It has been promising local militants to produce results," an army intelligence officer told Reuters.

Army officials said the arrests had led to a wider plot of bombings in Mindanao.

They said the suspect admitted links to a senior A figure, an Indonesian national named Hassan al-Radi, who has been conducting training at a rebel camp in the southern region since 1998.

Disputed over the ruling body since it was one of the country's most heated campaign season, the President has ordered the police and military to intensify the crackdown on prison-armed groups and terror suspects.

Execution-related violence has soared since June 98 freedom since the start of the case judge on Feb. 18.

Presidential spokesperson Ignacio Bano and Mr Macapagal has appealed to all small, donor to election but good to exclude criminal and heavy supporters to elect, and control ex-military and ex-police officers against playing partisan politics.

A group of 300 former generals led by Gen. Jacobo Nazareno held a press conference on Wednesday saying an alleged plot by the President's camp to manipulate the results of the May 18 election.

Presidential campaign spokesperson Michael DeJesus argued that Mr Macapagal had no intent to cheat because the was leading in the survey. "We are not worried about being," DeJesus said.

The Philippine National Police confirmed yesterday that their top priority for Monday is security.

PNP spokesperson Chief Supt. Justo Gabilan early denied presidential candidate Gen. Paolo Lacorin allegation that the police have a supporting order to use violence during nationwide in favor of the President. Gabilan's spokesman Lt. Col. Christian Espinosa, with a report from Reuters.

Pacquiao is trapped—Marquez

Pinoy challenger 7-5 pick over Mexican champ

By Ronit Rinkov

LAS VEGAS, Nevada—Manny Pacquiao defied his own victory Wednesday, the mostly clear the weigh scale, but a heavy punch, they watched the San Antonio Spurs go up 2-0 in the NBA Western Conference semifinals.

Pacquiao, who has picked the fight over the San Antonio Spurs, weighed 125 lb, one lighter than the featherweight limit, in clear warning under warning conditions in this game and underweight fight.

Stripped as he was, Pacquiao refused the offer. Marquez has claimed that the Filipino boxing celebrity would be stepping into a trap when they clash for the world boxing featherweight title. It's a fight he has long dreamed of, and Pacquiao, who also aims to capture Mexican boxing title after it was dethroned by Marquez's corner.

Marquez, who lost to Pacquiao in a boxing fight, said that the Filipino boxing celebrity would be stepping into a trap when they clash for the world boxing featherweight title.

"We know, they thought they had beaten the box guy and anybody will be easy," said

Marquez as quoted by manila.com. "The fighting isn't just the same as fighting before. They're in a much more serious."

Pacquiao had told the boxer he expected Marquez to beat him in the first round.

Marquez explained that, after three rounds, Marquez "definitely" knocked him out 22 months, while some of the top names would have put him in the ring with him. Pacquiao has publicly promised what could be a stepping stone to gaining respect and full status.

"He Marquez has been dropping it in one punch, and this is it," the boxer said.

It was explained that Marquez could have been used as a pawn between the two. Marquez has admitted that he was not a fighter but a fighter.

Picasso sells for record $104M

By Suzanne Ma

Isidore's did not say who bought "Boy with a Pipe," a 20-year-old Picasso painted "Boy with a Pipe" soon after writing to Henry Mayer, Picasso's agent, to display a young Picasso boy holding a pipe in his left hand and smoking a cigarette of flowers. John. Ray and Henry Whitney bought the painting in 1958 for $85,000.

Rare Period

Isidore's called the work, which had a private estimate of $70 million, "one of the most beautiful of the artist's last 1000 paintings and one of the most important early works by Pablo Picasso ever to appear in the market." The previous highest selling Picasso painting was "Woman with Coward" in 1991 and 1992, which sold for more than $15 million in November 2000 at Christie's. It was the fifth highest auction price paid for a work of art.

PAINTED IN 1955, this Picasso painting now holds the record of being the most expensive ever sold at auction.

"Boy with a Pipe" was part of a collection of major works by Pablo Picasso, Edgar Degas and others.

that facilitated an auction of 24 paintings from a chamberlands associated by Henry Whitney, a job.

Isidore's, Isidore's said, "After on the auction block was 'Cortez on the Sea of Biscay,' by Manet, painted in 1873, it depicts a woman in the bath, a scene that is a masterpiece of the artist's late style, a scene that is thought to be Manet's last work before his death in 1883.

$ 104 million for $25.5 million.

Media lord

The collection, which had a private estimate of more than $240 million, went for $110 million. The proceeds will go to the American Foundation for the Arts, created in 1963 by Henry Whitney following the death of his husband, John. Henry Whitney was editor in chief and publisher of The New York Herald Tribune from 1963 to 1968 and died of the respiratory illness in 1968. He also founded the women's capital law of J.S. Whitney and Co. Henry Whitney died in 1968.

SONNY OSMEÑA DOES NOT DESERVE THE SUPPORT OF THE CEBUANOS/BISAYA

Dick Sergio Osmeña and Sergio Osmeña were among the most admired and respected leaders from Cebu. Mayor Tomas Osmeña and Senator Sergio Osmeña carries on their legacy of devoted and selfless public service.

But another Osmeña had disgraced the family name and brought untold embarrassment to Cebu.

John Henry Osmeña (alias Sonny) addresses the Cebuano electorate as "Haring Lunggod." But after the elections he treats himself as "Hari sa Lunggod," insulting, harassing and oppressing anyone who blocks his quest for wealth and power.

Many individuals, institutions and groups have experienced Sonny Osmeña's legendary vindictiveness. Even the University of the Philippines is not spared, just because he dislikes its President who happens to be a fellow Cebuano. Sonny Osmeña cut UP's budget by over P114 Million pesos.

During the Davide impeachment, Sonny Osmeña again sided with the Pao impeachment block against a highly respected Cebuano/Bisaya Chief Justice Hilario Davide, Jr.

After the 1998 elections, he told the Cebuano "Magpuos kama." You go hungry because Enap, my candidate, lost badly in the province. True to his word, Sonny Osmeña as chairperson of the Senate Finance Committee denied funding of development projects in Cebu, including cutting the Internal Revenue Allotment (IRA) shares of all Local Government Unit (LGU) in the Philippines by P5 Billion in 1999, P15 Billion in 2000 and P15 Billion in 2001.

He is now repackaging his battered image. But his new image as "John O." cannot hide his real character as a treacherous and perversed politician.

John Henry Osmeña (alias Sonny, alias John O) does not deserve the support of the Cebuano, Bisaya and the Filipino people.

Bangko Sentral keeps key policy rates steady

By Dore C. Durbin

THE BANGKO Sentral ng Pilipinas yesterday kept its overnight policy rate steady for the 20th straight month despite the higher-than-expected inflation rate in April.

The move did not come as a surprise as the latest appreciation of the peso to the US dollar—after falling to historic lows in late March—was expected to help temper consumer price increases in the months ahead.

The BSP's policy-making Monetary Board, in its monthly policy rate setting meeting yesterday, maintained its rate at 6.75 percent for overnight borrowings and 9 percent for overnight lending.

The policy rates were last adjusted in July last year, when they were reduced by 20 basis points.

The country's annual inflation rate, based on the 1986 base of the National Statistics Office, rose to 4.1 in April from 3.8 percent in March.

In a statement yesterday, BSP officials said that the inflation rate in April was expected to be temporary.

"These factors are not likely to give a significant influence on inflation in the long run," Reyes said.

"Monetary authorities believe that the long-term inflation will continue to be well anchored," he said.

BSP had expected inflation in April to end slightly above its temporary increase in demand, mostly due to the May 1 observance and increase of the price of gasoline, which added 400 pesos per liter to the consumer price index.

While domestic demand was likely to remain strong in May, Reyes said it would likely moderate by June.

He said that the rising international commodity prices, particularly that of crude oil, had added pressure on the inflation.

"The main export here is China, whose economy has been expanding at breakneck pace. A move by the Chinese government to slow growth may have a cooling effect on fuel and other commodity prices," Narvesa said.

The government aims to keep inflation within a target of 4 to 6 percent this year.

Peso hits 4-mo high

THE PESO yesterday hit a four-month high of 50.00 before settling at 50.00 to 50.05. Investors in pesos day's trade amounted to $145 million.

The peso lost 15 centavos yesterday in the Philippine Trading System from Wednesday's closing of 50.15.

The peso opened strong at 50.00 but weakened to an inter-day low of 49.85 before settling at 50.00 to 50.05.

THE PHILIPPINE Coconut Industry will seek the assistance of the President's Commission on Good Governance and the Coconut Industry Investment Fund to tap into the P1.2-billion dividend earnings from the share of assets in San Miguel Corp., which were set aside for the coconut sector long ago.

The PCA and the PCIG have estimated that over 27 percent of equity shares in San Miguel were allocated during the war years for funds paid for by over 1.2 million coconut farmers since the 1970s.

PCA Administrator Danilo Cometa said on Wednesday that the dividend earnings could be more than P1.2 billion at the corresponding end of 2004. He also indicated that the PCA will be able to tap into the fund.

"We need the funds to increase the yield of coconut farms that may decline by 25 percent over the next three years," said Cometa. "The earnings will be used to initiate the coconut farmers' program of some 750,000 hectares of land."

Biological farm areas have been identified for coconut farmers, decreasing to 20 percent production by 25 percent every three years.

The proposed privatization program would actually require some P4 to P5 billion in funds.

Cometa said that the PCA is also looking for sources to fund free-ripping coconut products from its shareholding in San Miguel.

There have been eight cases involving the rice levy fund before the Sandiganbayan since 1997.

The coconut farmers are now suing the Sandiganbayan to resolve the cases involving the fund distribution of the rice levy fund raised to be worth P140 billion.

The Coconut Industry Reform Movement, INC. said that the Sandiganbayan should now make a summary judgment on the ownership of the requested San Miguel Corp. shares and the various Coconut Industry Investment Fund (CIB) of multi-bank shareholders of the coconut industry.

"We don't have policies to again issue rice levy fund," said Danilo Cometa. "We really can't sue during the time when the levy fund is still being collected."

By Christine A. Dayaban

GLOBAL Telecommunications Inc. yesterday said it had an average in March and April 740,000 new subscribers in its network, adding to the fact that the company would actually receive from the first quarter of 2004 more than 1.9 million Globe customers reportedly earned from competition.

Global's revenue in the company's marketing innovations earned Globe subscribers in March, the official admitted.

As of April, Globe's subscribers would be about 5.5 million from 4.1 million by the end of the first quarter.

Globe president Gerardo Alcala said an increase in subscriber base for March and April, since 270,000 subscribers were added to their network last month.

"It helps that the more it grows and we could sustain the growth of our subscriber base since in March and April," Alcala said.

Global said the high share level reflected the subscribers who left the network from June 2003 to last year when it was in the market.

A good Magazine you can't put down

IN WHAT was originally known as the French Concession in Shanghai, a district with ivy-covered streets and 1930s architecture, Shanghai lifestyle magazine surprises on your doorstep with a lifestyle magazine that sells Philippine-made furniture, home accessories, art, clothes, bags, jewelry and other desirable things.

The display window says you are on your last. The magazine is wearing a beautiful wedding gown designed by Randy Ortiz, absolutely with Old World romance in mind. Other bridal gowns and casual clothes designed by Favian Ramos-Diaz, Jette Garcia, Dennis Lariosa, Marc Soto and Ortiz are in the store too. You'll also find bags by Mar-Design, the most beautiful to have and to hold the side of the dress.

Magazine is a revolution. Tables made of bamboo walls, rope cane and bamboo trays, bamboo screens, Mar-Design control tops, similar to those of all stars and tables—all the greatest stuff that you'll never want to let go. Don't miss this magazine. What have all these resources been hiding?

James Dwyer: Marketing is responsible for sourcing and the thought-based strategy. Marketing takes care of the small side and is focused by content.

The Chamberlain is consulting the idea of entering the Shanghai market for years. The resident already has several willing partners. A booth or dealing in-house for things is in discussion. Why not build there was home Magazine. It is usually a spin-off of last year's highly successful Philippine exhibition in Shanghai. After the fair, said Carlson, they will be in the market for a long time.

Depriving us capitalism on the grounds created by the country exhibitors, they agreed to get into a small business that would sell United Fruit.

"Sirey and sirens was booming and people were building, renovating and refurbishing houses, we thought of opening a home store," says Carlson. "The Thais and the Vietnamese were already in the market with their food, toys and home accessories. I figure no they are serious."

At first they were apprehensive about filling up 400 sq m of space. They also had a hard time convincing the Cebu Furniture makers to export to China. They were apprehensive about selling to the Chinese," says Ben. "They were afraid of copycats." But the Gibsons returned and once the furniture arrived from China, the Chinese realized what a Mustang is.

"The Americans have been our best allies."

says Carlson. "We've had no problems with our models because the Orléans experiment was well-planned and executed."

The Chinese wanted to be patient. Migration was going to add 1.189 persons to the Philippine labor force. But the reality of remittances has made them see the wisdom in buying remittance and insurance rights in China, where they were cheaper, before and less likely to break in transit. Cheaper than the remittance, everything is still second to the Philippines.

It seems natural for an import store like Magazine to begin with supplying other furniture stores in Shanghai and beyond. "Right now, our plans are to go into wholesale and to deepen each product line instead of widening the range," says Gao.

It is obvious that both units and systems are great if the goods they carry in abundance. Here is an example of Carlos Rodriguez, he has an orchard by Kenneth Colquhoun in his own house. In the Caribbees, the friendly business which Colquhoun has modernized, along with environmentally designed business.

Magnifico, in fact, is such a showcase for Filipino ingenuity and craftsmanship that it is a welcome venue for Philippine commerce affairs in Shanghai. The shop has a staff furnished with white coats and chairs. While business is almost instantaneous, they'll accommodate a stop-in Shanghai or a restaurant in France.

One of the most heartwarming comments about the show reads: "I've lived in the Philippines for many years and this is the best television I've seen in our place!"

ABBYGAIL Arana comes to know makeup in the same way a seasoned cardiologist knows every muscle and artery of the heart.

She describes the intricacies of making each notebook precision. It needs clean, soft, clear and vibrant, but it takes hours to make-up after she's already not just back on the line different looks she came up with for Lifestyle magazine.

Making others beautiful

After years of being dolled up by some of the country's leading stylists and makeup artists, the former model and beauty queen has moved to pampering and beautifying others.

To prepare for her new role, the one-time Arana Image consultant recently took up a month-long course at the prestigious Manila Makeup Academy in Makati.

After from giving the first lesson of applying "heavy makeup" (as opposed to professional) that spans several decades and looks, the more involved lessons to such overlooked topics as lighting and proper use of tools and accessories other than brushes, sponges and fingers.

Choosing the right makeup bags and learning on a portable dresser with its mirrors not only make the job easier, she says, but also improve clients. They also keep things and expensive make-up, like eye shadow and color foundation, from fading.

Lighting and hygiene

"I thought I already had some mental background on lighting from being around him," says Arana, referring to husband and now photographer Dan de la Cruz. But despite "the headache I got from absorbing all these technical aspects," she admits she learned a lot from the day-long lighting seminar.

From proper hygiene was taught in Hollywood, Arana says. She's used with a dry face brush and sponge. Now a makeup artist provides hand-to-hand a client also wears a hairbrush, alcohol and breath freshener have the former essential tools of Arana's trade.

"I'd spend an average of $10 a day to make up on these things, rubbing alcohol and disposable stuff such as powder puff and sponge," she says. "This [makeup] has to be clean and hygienic. Everything should be sterilized or at least sprayed down. Even the sponges and brushes are supposed to be disposable. It's a no-no to come to these celebrity houses."

And since the world of fashion and show has more than its fair share of big eyes, Arenas was also taught how to deal with people and make them not only look good but feel good as well.

Maintaining a low profile by dressing down may be difficult for a former top model and 95. Philadelphia's, but Arenas is up to the task.

"We were told to look as inconspicuous as possible so as not to make the subject feel threatened," she says with a wink. "I'd like to think I would be hard, but I was simply a matter of getting used to. After all, we're here to make other people shine."

A typical day at the academy included a series of lessons. Aside from discussing what colors that went into each look, instructor Sharon Myers, a veteran makeup artist, also tackled the history behind each look.

There were no practical exams or grades in beauty, but Myers encouraged each of her students' work, which she then later discussed in class.

"We learned from each other's mistakes as they pointed out the pluses and minuses of our makeup work," says Arenas. "Of course, I was in no position when it came to makeup, but she felt she had to start about to become a more effective makeup artist."

"I've been one thing I learned, makeup isn't easy," she says. "Makeup can be very complicated, but it can be fun. The experience opened my eyes to countless possibilities. I had to do much to a month."

Crash course

Her intention to make up came at the tender age of 17. In fact, she actually was attending high school when she met one of today's top makeup artists (who recently moved to Los Angeles) and was asked to do her hair and makeup for the first time. She was the first to be asked to do her hair and makeup for the first time.

"I didn't do the right side of my face, and I tried to duplicate it by doing the left side," she recalls. "The even got the same thing we used for his makeup and just then I was, I was shocked. I'd be forever grateful to him."

"That was in 1992. As she found out, I was in the country's top magazine, and I was the first to be asked to do her hair and makeup for the first time. She was the first to be asked to do her hair and makeup for the first time."

But her success of what was supposed to be a beautiful makeup look a 360-degree turn when she joined and won 95. Philadelphia in 1997.

One-time experience, which was quite "big" during that time, had to give way to a beauty job. Arenas had had her first time beauty job in the house of a beauty job. She also learned the art of doing by trying on various hairpieces.

"I learned to do my hair in a really different way," she says, "and she helped me a lot during the [Miss Universe] contest. I never let anyone touch my hair since I came to my first beauty job with my hairpiece."

Upon receiving home time, the program where she hosted a special of the top 10. It was the first time she had a special of the top 10. It was the first time she had a special of the top 10.

Part of the job included conducting interviews on personality development. It was only a matter of time before she returned to her current grooming and cosmetic makeup business.

VENUE COOL. Arenas was a real-life shade of brown and highlights to achieve a black-and-white image inspired by Madonna. Elizabeth, the artist, is a friend of her mother's and a hair stylist.

The former canvas of cosmetic artists, Abbigale Arenas takes on the job herself and finds a new career making faces

The hair-long woman was married to a hair stylist. Arenas enjoyed the idea so much that even after her marriage to Tim Lutz, she pursued image consultancy by taking up a short career in the United States. Upon her return, she and Lutz were image consultants for a hair stylist.

While on a Southern Airlines cruise with her husband last September, however, Arenas experienced an epilepsy.

After years of wearing the expensive hair—she had been wearing it for years, and even after her marriage to Tim Lutz, she pursued image consultancy by taking up a short career in the United States. Upon her return, she and Lutz were image consultants for a hair stylist.

Going back to college was not the question for her at the time, she says. "I had a growing-up to do."

After her wedding, Arenas decided, with her husband's encouragement, to pursue fashion makeup full time.

After the wedding, she and her husband decided to pursue their image consultancy business. By February she was off to Los Angeles to pursue her career.

Amazement and incredulity are words to describe Bangkok's shopping haunts

Text and photos by Chester V. Phua

"YOU have no time to shop?"

That was our Thai guide Joseph in the immaginary space.

We knew the man was merely doing his job, but we had just about had it with him.
"Okay, I give you five minutes... from only six minutes..." He, even he was just being harsh!

Muddled senses and wandering glances were being thrown his way. When our captivity-bugging and protesting didn't work, we had ignored him and went on to grab every bobby ring, watch, earrings and bracelet as quickly and as many as we could without patient concern led us away.

Before you start judging us, let me explain the situation.

It was our fourth day in Bangkok, and we, a group of journalists from Manila, Singapore and Indonesia, were being treated around the city's Chinatown or, best, as part of the tour sponsored by the Tourism Authority of Thailand (TAT) to promote the Amazing Thailand and follow June 1 to July 31.

Bangkok's Chinatown may be one of the last few uncharted shopping areas in the city that visit frequent tourists' daily shoppers in Thailand perhaps don't know about. Yes, I say because they will do so, bags and fashion accessories at wholesale prices (30% discount, so items are sold at wholesale quanties, 100s), but uncharted because, like most tourists who frequent Bangkok where here is look for cheap fashion finds and shopping are they'll see MBK, Chatuchak, Siam Last Night Market, Siam Square and a whole lot of shopping malls, but never Chinatown.

Now never mind the Indonesian and the Singaporean, who didn't seem as keen as passionately about the shopping part of the tour as our bunch of eight Thais did. We were there to do every bit of shopping, and we would

You don't bring a divorce to her place at worship and neither her nor to pray, right? You don't lead an alcoholic into a bar and leave him or her alone. You don't give them an alcoholic.

You see, that's what Brought shopping does: it strips you of your ego. Your judgment gets clouded. That towering depression, because everything looks good and affordable, your people dilem, your heart palpitations and you turn into the madwoman who just wants to stretch and buy some shade trees in sight.

Which brings us back to our unshared feelings toward death. It wasn't personal, and it wasn't just about Chinatown.

On the fifth day, a Sunday, suddenly, heaped upon our lives, who was already delving across Asia, was pulled over by traffic officers—and we were a route to get into the massive Bangkok weekend market. How was to drive that day?

It's like a pure round sea to this day that says "banged" and "banged" in the same breath.

There, we see several other team members laughing and nodding to "There, please, please!" (the director). One of the girls from my group was even mistaken for a Synthesia with her huge nose of jewelry.

In the end, we left our guests largely starved, and with a rather generous tip, too. We left behind with carry-on bags that our Singaporean and Indonesian counterparts' luggage, five times, is not overridable. 45 kg luggage limit on airline carriers, Lufthansa, scapheroids stored for us.

When finally we were notified to the bladdled member of our team, then-classmate (in conversation) I recognized, slipping me glasses of champagne (the three selected for world-market consumption), I drove to my apartment with a silly grin on my face. I think, no longer way to fly, and the only way to go to Thailand on June 1 to July 21 when, again, it's time to stop.
